At Wells Farm, we apply stringent biosecurity practices to maintain the health of our pigs. Among other things, this is achieved by limiting and controlling visitors entering the farm to minimise the risk of introducing diseases. Our vets ensure not only ongoing maintenance of stringent health practices but assist with any individual issues as they arise.

We take pride in knowing that our produce has been kept in the stringent health standards from birth to table. Our quality control department ensures that the produce purchased from us is the result of professional care and world class best practice.

The choice of location is no accident either. The climate within which our animals thrive, and their nutrition result in a high quality and tender product that is the hallmark of our business.
